

I'm not sure this is strictly an ethics problem, but if a student is trying to determine if they passed the F.E. exam and are faced with the following challenge before they will be told if they passed, and if after 2 hours of trying to enter the "words" they think they must be crazy since they cannot get past this point, and they go crazy, has the Board acted ethically?

Want to play the game? See the link at the bottom of this page.

Actual challenges:

Exam results are now available online for the April 2010 exams

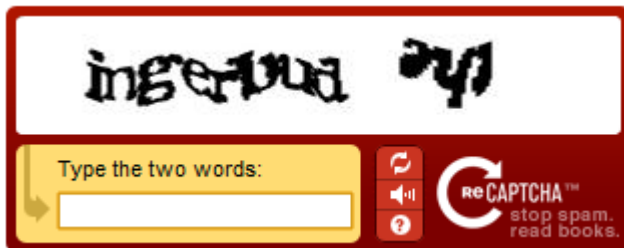

Please fill out the information below to check your results:

First Name Initial

Last Name

SSN Last 4

Exam Type?

upecobe mummenden

Type the two words:

matchea

Type the two words:

soleted

Type the two words:

enearte con

Type the two words:

ectught

Type the two words:

berstis

Type the two words:

Your next word to type is:

Be sure your caps lock key is not on.

 nabild

Type the two words:

reCAPTCHA™
stop spam.
read books.

ureansumop chilrob

Type the two words:

reCAPTCHA™
stop spam.
read books.

7609210217 reaseve

Type the two words:

reCAPTCHA™
stop spam.
read books.

st smixtief

Type the two words:

reCAPTCHA™
stop spam.
read books.

licesion okorulo!

Type the two words:

reCAPTCHA™
stop spam.
read books.

And the king of them all:

The link to this mess if you would like to see if we're kidding:

https://www.tbpe.state.tx.us/exam_check_grades.php

Hit the little double round-n-round arrows to get a new pair of "words". Also be sure to check out their auditory challenges. Hilarious.